HONGKONG, JANUARY 28BD, 1880.

ANOTHER surprise has been sprung upon us by Mr. HENNESSY. The announcement that the seat at the Legislative Council rendered Macant by the departure of Mr. Hvon Bobb Gigs has been filled by the appointment of Mr. No Chor, cannot fail to be received not only with astonishment but also dissatisfaction. We do not wish to impugn-Mr. No -Cnox's qualifications for the seat, provided it were desirable to give it to a Chinaman, though even then it may be doubted whether a native merchant of high standing Sthultime. would not have been a botter representative of the views and requirements of his countrymon. If, however, it were thought necessar that a Chinaman should have a sent at the Council as the representative of the native acting Crown Solicitor during the absence of Mr. community, the straightforward course would have been to have created another seat for that purpose, instead of diminishing the already small influence possessed by the sent to Edinburgh Castle." In the charter it is provided that "in addition to the said Governor, the said Legislative Council shall be composed of such public officers within the said Colony, or of such athe within the same, as shall from time to time us, . . all of which councillors shall hold their places in the said Council at our and Nester. pleasure." From this it will be seen that the Council may be composed sutirely o officials, or of such persons as the Crown (by the Governor), may be pleased to appoint should be a number of unofficial members of the Council, and it is not unreasonable to as-

Long custom may be almost said to have given the force of law to this posi- alteration was made in consideration of the contion, although Governors have not infrequently trenched so far on the assumptive rights of the colonists, to serve their own ands, as to appoint officials as unofficial members of Couneil, thus obtaining complete control of votes which it was intended should be perfectly independent. The convenience of this arrange. ment to the Government is obvious. In these remarks we do not wish to be understood as objecting to the presence in the Council of the official who at present sits as an profficial member. We think it highly desirable the Council, but it should be in virtue of his office; his position at present is a nontalous; But though Governors have availed themselves to same extent of this ingenious means of obtaining control of votes assumed to be independent, we believe we less than three independent members on the Council to represent the vast commercial. should be. To appoint others is an breach, if not of the letter, at all events of the spirit of our charter. It is important not to lose sight of the position-occupied by natives in such colonies as Hongkong. or that they would willingly see subject races taking any active part in legislation for them. To meet this difficulty, therefore, the Crown has reserved the whole of the legislative power in its own hards; but recognising the right of British subjects to be heard in legislation affecting them, gives a certain number of sents on the Council to independent members! Many boxes of letters are received at the Post Office not sealed, that is to say, the ber ! fostoned with sealing wax, but there is no impression of a seal. The attention of bexhelders is called to the necessity of carefully scaling such boxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chitbook or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precaution leaves a doubt as to whether the contents of the box ever reached the Post Office; the emission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been abstracted for the sake of the Postage Stamps.

EXTRACTS. MISSING. Missing, no more: a dumb, dead wall Of silence and darkness stands Between us and they who left us here, In the golden morning of the year, With hope and promise and parting cheer, Wet eyes and waving hands.

Never an omen told our bearts How fate larked, grim and dark; Fresh and awest smiled the April day, And the treacherous waves in hunlight lay, Kissing the sands of the sholtered bay, And laughing around the bark.

Like molten silver shore her sails, -As she glided from our gaze; And we turned us back to our homes again, To let quistom grow o'er the yearning pain, And to count by the hearth, ah, labour vain! The lonely lingering days.

Never a letter from loving hands, Nover a message came; We know long since should the port be won; We know what the fierce north gales had done; And slowly crept over every one A terror he would not name.

Ah me! those weary mornings, When out on the great pier-head We strained our sight o'er the tossing seas, And sindled each change in the fitful breeze And stroye to answer, in tones of case, Light question coldly said.

All met those weary midnights, Hearing the breakers rour; Starting from dreams of storm and death, With besting pulses and catching broath, To hear the white surf "call" beneath, Along the hollow shore.

Never a finsh down the wires, Never's word from the East. From the port she sailed for-how long ago: Why, even a spar one would weep to know, Tosasd on the wild waves' obb and flow, Were somothing real at least. Missing, missing, and silence, "The great tides gise and fall; The sea lies dimpling out in the light,

· Or dances, all living, gleaming white;

Day follows day, night rolls on night;

Missing, and that is all. . The tark crossed out in the log.book, The names dropped out of the prayers; In many a household a vacant place; In many a life a vanished grace, We know our cast in the long life race, But only God knows theirs. From the Tinsley's Magazine.
